

I have read that the FCC is considering expanding the LPFM services. My problem with that is , in the county I live in (San Diego) K-LOVE radio is the only christian music available, and I know this is true of many other cities and counties. I love the positive music and the fact that in such a negative and violent society I can receive hope and uplifting messages.

Most cities have all different types of secular music stations, while there are few or no christian stations. It seems to me that in a free society there should be equal access to christian music as there is to secular music.

We live in a troubled world where depression and hopelessness are the norm, we desperately need hope and encouraging words and these are available through christian radio stations.

I pray you will carefully consider the value of christian radio and not give priority to LPFM stations over others who use the FM translators.

Prayfully,

Phyllis J. Meyer